WASHINGTON, DC—Representative Steve Driehaus today announced his support of the Cincinnati Preservation Association’s proposal to purchase the James N. Gamble House in Westwood. In a letter to the Greenacres Foundation, which recently acquired the Gamble House property, Rep. Driehaus expressed his hope that Greenacres and the Cincinnati Preservation Association could reach an accommodation so that the historic Gamble House could be preserved.

“The Gamble House is an important part of our community’s heritage and is a cherished landmark in Westwood. I’m certain that the Cincinnati Preservation Association and the Greenacres Foundation can find a way to preserve the house while allowing Greenacres to go forward with its programs on the property,” said Rep. Driehaus.

Text of Rep. Driehaus’s letter follows.

Carter Randolph, Ph.D. Executive Vice President Greenacres Foundation 8255 Spooky Hollow Road Cincinnati, OH 45242

Dear Dr. Randolph:

I write today expressing my support for the proposed purchase of the James N. Gamble House by the Cincinnati Preservation Association, and I urge your board to work with the group toward a solution that will allow Greenacres’ work to go forward while preserving a landmark important to the community and our region’s history.

The Greenacres Foundation’s programs in education, agriculture and nature conservation represent an outstanding contribution to our region. I applaud your plan to expand these activities to Westwood. Furthermore, I believe that the Gamble House can be successfully integrated into Greenacres’ plans for the property. The house is an important cultural asset for greater Cincinnati, central to the history of Westwood, and cherished by the community. I have high hopes that the disposition of the Gamble House can be beneficial to all concerned parties.

Please contact my office if I can be of assistance.

Sincerely,

Steve Driehaus Member of Congress
